E.A. Wrigley

Books

Journal articles and contributed chapters, etc.

19. ‘Current work in British historical demography before 1800’, International Union for the p.17.

22. ‘Population, family and household’, in M. Ballard, ed., New movements in the study and teaching

23. ‘European historical demography’, Population and economics. Proceedings of Section V
(historical demography) of the Fourth Congress of the International Economic History

1972)

25. ‘Some problems of family reconstitution using English parish register material: the example of Colyton’. Third International Conference of Economic History, Munich 1965, Section VII,

27. ‘Age at marriage in early modern England’, Proceedings of the XIII International Congress of Genealogical and Heraldic Sciences, 1976, pp. 219-34.

28. ‘The process of modernization and the industrial revolution in England’, Journal of
R.I. Rotberg, ed., Social mobility and modernization: a Journal of Interdisciplinary History

29. ‘Le processus de modernisation et la révolution industrielle en Angleterre' Annales, E.S.C., 27

ISBN 0-7131-5694-5,

31. ‘Clandestine marriage in Tetbury in the late seventeenth century’, Local Population Studies, 10

29 (1975), pp.299-316.

33. ‘Demography and archives. I. The significance of appropriate source material to the progress of

46. ‘Malthus reassessed’ [review article], Journal of Historical Geography, VIII (1982), pp.189-92.

57. ‘The local and the general in population history’. The sixteenth Harte Lecture, University of Exeter, 13 May 1983 (Exeter, 1985).

75. ‘“The great commerce of every civilised society”: urban growth in early modern Europe’ [The Checkland Memorial Lecture], Scottish Economic and Social History, 12 (1992), pp.5-23.

83. 'How reliable is our knowledge of the demographic characteristics of the English population in the early modern period?', Historical Journal, 40 (1997), pp.571-95.

Joint articles

2. with other members of the editorial committee, ‘Towards a population policy for the United Kingdom’, supplement to Population Studies (1970)

